Portfolio Commentary

Executive Summary:

The fund's NAV rose by 2.85% to EUR 1089.56 in April.

We think that the reaction lows seen in many stock markets on the 2nd March may well turn out to have been the lows for the year, but we are about to hit the Great Wall of seasonality ("Sell In May And Go Away" or "Sell In June And Go To The Moon"). This may hold us back in the summer months.

The fund has seen new inflows and these are now completely deployed in 16 GTI advisor funds, of which 9 are closed-ended, daily dealing funds trading for the most part at discounts to net asset value and a further 7 lesser known open-ended funds. These specialist funds –as we have always told investors– are starting to dominate the asset allocation of the fund at the expense of the more liquid and perhaps better known closed end funds.

We added no new names last month. Our strategic aim is to increase the low correlation with the major equity markets across the seasonally unfavorable summer months. As of now, the fund has shown more welcome progress in May.

Our views and asset allocation methodology are explained more fully in the GTI newsletters, copies of which are available from Brian Phillips below or the fund's advisers. This and other interesting research is shortly to be available on our web-site: www.global-thematic.com.
